POSTTRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER:

Biological, Clinical, and Cultural Approaches to Trauma's Effects

CONFERENCE CO-CHAIRS:

Robert Lemelson, PhD

Allan Tobin, PhD

CONFERENCE OBJECTIVES:

This conference addresses the profound effects of traumatic experiences, which persist long after the horrifying events themselves. The tragedy of September 11, 2001 testifies to this and underscores the importance of understanding the ways in which trauma shapes and is shaped by our culture and biology.

Integrating cultural, clinical, and biological perspectives, the conference explores posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and other human responses to traumatic events. The goal is to encourage the sharing of knowledge and methods in an effort to create broader, more integrative models of PTSD and other disorders whose complex sociocultural and biological determinants defy any single approach.

Following an evening address by former New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, the three-day symposium thoroughly examines trauma's effects by focusing on neurobiological, psychiatric, anthropological, and historical levels of analysis. Day 1 explores both the concept of and human response to trauma. Day 2 examines trauma's effects on development, future vulnerability to psychopathology, and culture. Day 3 focuses on therapeutic issues and, more generally, on individual and sociocultural dimensions of trauma.

Each day includes presentations from scientists, clinicians, clinical researchers, anthropologists, and historians. In addition, several New York City officials who dealt with the effects of 9/11 discuss some of the formidable public policy and public health challenges of such disasters. Each day, speakers also participate in an open roundtable discussion to integrate the different perspectives of the day and answer questions from the audience.

The conference also includes a poster exhibit featuring recent research on trauma. We encourage scholars at all levels and from all disciplines to submit abstracts.

THE FOUNDATION FOR PSYCHOCULTURAL RESEARCH was founded in 2000 by a gift from Robert Lemelson. The Foundation supports and advances theoretical, empirical, and methodological interdisciplinary approaches at the intersection of the basic sciences, psychiatry, psychology, linguistics, and anthropology through educational programs, fellowships, grants, and symposia. By supporting such interdisciplinary work, the Foundation seeks to better understand the ways in which our biology and culture interact in the creation of illness.

THE UCLA BRAIN RESEARCH INSTITUTE (BRI) is an organized research unit within the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA, with over 225 scientist members, including faculty and researchers in departments throughout UCLA as well as in other institutions.

THE UCLA NEUROPSYCHIATRIC INSTITUTE (NPI) is UCLA's multi-disciplinary institute of human neuroscience, providing leadership in the study and treatment of disorders of human behavior, the brain, and the mind.

THE UCLA ANXIETY PROJECT is a collaboration between general scientists, brain imaging scientists, and clinical researchers at UCLA and is designed to facilitate an understanding of the mechanisms underlying anxiety disorders and accelerate the application of basic scientific knowledge about fear and anxiety to improve treatments for these disorders.

THE UCLA CENTER FOR HISTORY, CULTURE, AND NEUROSCIENCE encourages scholarship in the cultural and historical aspects of the neurosciences. The Center is closely affiliated with the Neuroscience History Archives (NHA) and its work in advancing and diffusing knowledge about the history of neuroscience. For more information on the NHA, visit their Web site at www.neurosciencearchives.org.

THE UCLA GRADUATE DIVISION serves as the campus-wide advocate for the advancement of graduate education and strives for standards of excellence, fairness, and equity in all graduate programs.

UCLA EXTENSION is one of the nation's most comprehensive institutions of continuing higher education. Founded in 1917, Extension currently offers 4,500 courses a year, linking 100,000 enrollees to new opportunities through lifelong learning.
